✓ Before You Leave

- ☐ Request Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) paperwork from HR (if your employer has 50+ employees and you have 12+ months of service)
- ☐ Get your employer parental leave policy in writing -- weeks, pay %, and coordination with any short-term disability (STD) coverage
- ☐ Review your short-term disability (STD) policy -- check your carrier, benefit %, and duration
- ☐ Ask HR how your employer leave coordinates with your short-term disability (STD) policy -- concurrent vs. sequential
- ☐ Confirm your health insurance continues during leave and how premiums are handled
- ☐ Check if your state has any paid leave program -- a growing number of states do. Visit leavigation.com for details.
- ☐ Notify your employer of your leave start and expected return date in writing

✓ File Your Claims

- ☐ Submit FMLA notice to your employer at least 30 days before leave if foreseeable
- ☐ File your STD claim with your insurance carrier -- check your policy for the filing deadline
STD typically covers 6-12 weeks at 60% of wages. Confirm your waiting period (usually 7-14 days).
- ☐ If your state has a paid family leave or state disability program, file your claim with the state agency
- ☐ Keep copies of all forms submitted to HR and your insurance carrier

? Questions to Ask HR

- ☐ What is my last day of full pay?
- ☐ Does my employer leave run at the same time as STD, or after?
- ☐ Will my health insurance, 401k, and other benefits continue during leave?
- ☐ What is the STD carrier name and how do I file a claim?
- ☐ Does my state have any paid family or disability leave program?
- ☐ What is the process if I need to extend my leave?
- ☐ Who is my point of contact while I am out?
